

Mark Sanchez received his Bachelor's in Music Education from Baylor University and his Master of Music in Instrumental Studies with a Concentration in Violin Performance at Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary. During his studies, he has worked with renowned violinist Eugene Cherkasov, Dr. Eka Gogigashvili, Dr. Kirsten Yon, William Preucil, and Dr. Elizabeth Adkins. Mark is currently pursuing a Performer's Diploma at Southern Methodist University under the tutelage of Diane Kitzman.

Mark has performed as a section violinist with the Waco Symphony and Temple Symphony, and currently serves as a principal violinist with the Brazos Chamber Orchestras and Mansfield Philharmonic. He and his wife Keji were selected to perform for the prestigious annual Stephen Barr Memorial Concert Series at Texas Wesleyan University in 2018. His musical experiences led him to conduct the Chapel and Chamber Orchestras at Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary as well as teach violin as an adjunct faculty. While currently in school at SMU, he teaches students privately, freelances, and performs frequently with his wife and a chamber music ensemble named the "Bluebird" quartet.
